What Has Happened in Kansas.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell, in the September McClure's smashes the last refuge of those apologists of John D. Rockefeller and his associates who, when tainted money discussion was rife, cried that if Standard Oil had been an offender once it had now reformed, and put itself above reproach.

"If one wants a neat demonstration," says Miss Tarbell, "complete to the last detail, that the Standard Oil Company is today, as always, 'conspiracy in restraint of trade,' he should go to Kansas. The 'oil war' in that state, which in turn amused, bewildered and excited the country during the earlier months of the present year, was the direct result of a sudden realization by the Kansans that the Standard had been playing in their territory a game 30 years old, playing it under their very noses so quickly and deftly that, keen as they pride themselves on being, they had not realized its meaning until they began to feel the pressure!"

The story of the Standard's attempt to gobble the Kansas oil field is the history of its earlier practical aggressions repeating itself, but with a different ending. In Kansas it encountered a new brand of public spirit, and went into the contest with this enlightened and electric commonwealth, handicapped by its past sins; but for a while, until public sentiment was aroused, Standard Oil had everything its own way.

Miss Tarbell tells in the September number what Standard Oil did to Kansas, how it came into the state after fortunes had been sunk in locating the oil, and by the operations of its old, well-tried juggernaut, the railroad rate, proceeded to gobble the fruits of the pioneers' sowing. Miss Tarbell shows in the clearest and most informing way just how the railroad operated as the secret allies of the Standard. The whole railroad situation appears in miniature in this story of the Standard Oil's smothering of the Kansas oil industry. What happened there is going on all over the United States, but the Kansans are the only Americans who have put the state above 'special privilege.' 'You may be investing $15,000,000 for taking care of our oil,' said the people. 'You may do the work more promptly and perfectly than any other concern ever could, but justice is more important than millions, and every man shall have a chance in Kansas. We are going to stop your game. You must play fair with us if you stay in Kansas.'

This is not the tone that states usually adopt toward their business rulers. Kansas is the first to try it. What has been the consequence to Kansas of this determined attitude, Miss Tarbell reserves for the October number, in which she will tell "What Kansas Did to Standard Oil."

FRAUD EXPOSED.

A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit, through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. A sure protection to you is our name on the wrapper. Look for it, on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others are mere imitations. H. E. BUCKLEN & CO. Chicago, Ill., and Windsor, Canada. For sale by J. C. Ferry, Salem.
